FOLLOW UP

HISTORY OF PRESENT ILLNESS: I had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Nelson in my cardiology clinic for the follow-up visit. He has a past medical history significant for perimembranous ventricular septal defect, varicose veins, and degenerative joint disease, who was initially seen in our cardiology clinic by Dr. Block back in 2011. At that time he was seen in clinic because of atypical chest pain. His stress test performed did not show any evidence of ischemia. An echocardiogram at that time showed EF of 60%, to 65% with mild tricuspid regurgitation, mild pulmonary insufficiency and mild mitral regurgitation. In that echo VSD was not visualized, but echo TEE performed back in 2006 showed a 3 mm perimembranous ventricular septal defect with a P dominant left to right shunting. The patient returns today to our cardiology clinic after a couple of years. He states he had episodes of palpitations a couple of weeks ago. He states he was asleep and woke up in the middle of the night with heart beating, heart pounding hard and racing. He states his heart did not feel like it was racing very fast but was pounding very hard.

HOME MEDICATIONS: Hydrochlorothiazide AC 25 p.r.n., nortriptyn 100 mg p.r.n., Escitalopram 180 mg p.r. daily.

PHYSICAL EXAMINATION:

Vital Signs: Heart rate is 65, blood pressure 140/90. Weight is 252.4 pounds. Height is 5' 6".

General: Very pleasant, awake, alert, oriented x3, no acute distress.

HEENT: Both the pupils are round, reactive to light. Extracranial muscles are intact. Tympanic membranes appear normal. Oral mucosa appears moist without any pallor or cyanosis.

Neck: Supple. No lymph nodes.

Heart: Regular rate and rhythm with a very soft 1-6 systolic murmur along the midsternal area.

Chest: Bilateral breath sounds. Clear to auscultation.

Abdomen: Nontender, nondistended. Good bowel sounds.

Extremities: No edema, clubbing or cyanosis. Peripheral pulses are 2+ bilaterally.

Skin: Appears normal.
